

Florida Personal Injury Settlements

Article by: Eric Morris

Making personal injury claim compensation is really fruitful in claiming monetary aid and compensation from the party responsible for the alleged wrong doing to the victim. The value of any personal injury claim depends on the facts and circumstances of your case. First, you have to determine whether the "defendant" - that is, the party that is responsible for creating the dangerous condition that caused the accident is liable. The next consideration is whether you were at fault and, if so, how much as compared to the "defendant." Under Florida law and under various laws, the jury is allowed to compare the negligence of the defendant to your negligence, if any.

Florida personal injury law history is witness to many cases where the actual financial claims have taken shape. For example, a 2.59 million dollar jury verdict was upheld against the Mandarin Oriental Hotel and Central Parking for the negligence of a valet driver pinning a pedestrian between cars. A former Penn State track star was swimming in an unlit swimming pool. dove underwater through a rubber inner tube, hit the bottom head first, and became a quadriplegic for life. There was no warning about proper diving safety, even surface diving. There were no lights. And, the owners of the pool were libel. The swimming pool manufacturer should provide warnings to consumers about diving shallow and "steering up" when surface diving in residential pools. Both were held liable. The victim received more than 8 million dollars.

Personal injury settlements can be achieved only through a thorough and skillful handling of the related case.
