You always had a dream to drive a luxurious car and with your sincere efforts you recently bought one. But because of some technical malfunctioning you are not able to enjoy the drive as more than often it is parked in service station. The customer care department of the car company is showing little interest in your problem. Yours is not the sole case. There are so many people like you who have faced such problems.

Seek redress under the Lemon Law. In order to protect consumer rights Lemon Law was enforced. It legally empowers consumers to force automobile manufacturer to replace a defective or unsafe vehicle. The lemon law differs from state to state and includes SUV's Vans, Trucks, Boats, etc.apart from cars. It states if a problem persists even after four times repairing of same defect, you have the lemon. For replacement and claiming your lemon you must be sure that the problem is of considerable significance.

You can claim for lemon in case of wide range of defects including: Engine problems, Transmission problems, Water leaks, Paint defects, Electrical problems, Brake problems, Steering problems, Vibrations, Bad smells, Rattles, etc.

It is important to know your rights as consumers and must exercise it judiciously. The lemon law is not limited to cars, SUVs or other automobiles it applies even to computers in order to protect consumers for any wrongful done. If you think the new PC you bought is not performing up to the standards, seek lemon and get it replaced.

Just check out what provisions regarding lemon your state offer. It is never between you and company when you are filing a lemon. It's between a consumer and a manufacturer. Government and law are not lenient on such issues why should you be? Be an aware consumer, fight your right.Sara Adams is a contributor to Legal Services For Less, a website providing Legal help at Very Less Price.
