Injury lawyers handle legal disputes related to negligence and damages done to a person or his property, rights or reputation. Negligence can be said to occur when a person or company does not perform in a safe manner and thereby causes injury or damage to another. In legal terms, when someone or something causes an injury to another person or thing, it is also called a 'tort'. This injury or damage could be caused directly, like in the case of rash driving, or indirectly, as in when someone slips and falls due to spills that haven't been cleaned up. The injury can be physical or psychological. An injury lawyer collects facts related to the injury and determines who may be at fault. The law allows the injured to demand compensation for medical fees and expenses. Additionally, compensation can also be sought for lost wages, and for pain and suffering.

Getting hold of an experienced injury lawyer can help you get fair compensation. If you try to negotiate with an insurance company or other party alone, it might lengthen the process and lead to confusion. To get maximum compensation for your damages, a professional injury lawyer should be hired.

Injury lawyers are up-to-date with changes in the law of injury. Sometimes they review your case free of charge. They should be deft, and capable of handling the court proceedings. If they have handled a variety of injury cases before, it is an added advantage. Some injury lawyers specialize in cases of brain or birth injuries. Injury lawyers are generally paid on a 'percentage' basis. If the settlement is done or the court rules in favor of the injured party, the lawyer receives a pre-negotiated percentage of the compensation. It can range up to 40% as well. You can get in touch with these lawyers through acquaintances, the Yellow Pages, law firms, or the Internet. It is better to verify their credentials and reputation before hiring them.
