

International Terrorists Sympathizers Using Our Media to Argue Their Case

Article by: Lance Winslow

During the past week I have spent my time participating on Political News Forums and Blogs and it is obvious that the sympathizers of International Terrorists, money raisers and recruiters are using our media reports to form arguments for debate. In fact they take the dirty laundry we air on our TV and in our newspapers and all our own divisiveness and embellish it to convince others of their cause and our evil.

Here is a recent post from a Hamas sympathizer on a political Blog; "The first to go into this arena should be the Bush Administration, as they send the dirt-poor men and women who join the military for a job and then the oilmen sit back and reap the benefits...meanwhile the young people(along with Iraqis) are killed."

That is a bunch of hokum obviously and I know it, because my Dad and brother are in the US Military and they are far from poor. Statistically these comments are baloney. There are both wealthy and poor in the US Military. And in the United States our poor live like royalty in regards to many others in other poor countries of the world so this is simply incorrect. Dirt poor says the international terrorist sympathizers? But people do not starve in America, so those we might consider our poor are not by world's standards anything close. The problem is that other people around the world do not know this.

Further President Bush is a great American President, one of the best leaders and the Free World is lucky to have him as the top leader of all nations. Additionally this supporter in the blogs of International Terrorism is a scoundrel in the midst and hardly has any right to speak of that which they do not know. Less than 3000 people US Soldiers have died and an entire nation has been liberated and may now choose its own destiny.

Liberty and Freedom, I suppose they do not think that is of value, as it would cut into the International Terrorists sick vision of the world, which they would rule over. And these comment about the deaths from combat; there are 300 million people in the United States, third largest nation in the World population wise and 2500 people die in automobile accidents on a 3-day holiday weekend and they die in vain, not the American Soldiers. Dying for the sake of freedom is something that should be rewarded and admired, not attacked by people that just do not get it. Be wise and careful what you read, as now these bloggers on the Internet are trying to shape our media's opinion with theirs and our media is helping them do it too. Consider this in 2006.
