

Is Personal Injury A Need Or A Joke!

Article by: Mohammad Latif

Has this ever happened to you... You're at home enjoying your meal and you get a knock at your door. "My name is Jack and I'm calling from (company name), have you or your family had an accident in the last 3 years? If so you could be entitled to personal injury compensation?"

Now for that moment what are you thinking? Are you looking back over the last 3 years to see if you or your family have incurred any personal injury? Or are you thinking of slamming the door in their face or setting the dog on them?

The fact is each one and much more has happened to salespeople who go knocking on peoples' door.

Firstly it's not polite as they're reminding you of your accident which could have been traumatic and secondly another personal injury company has said the same thing they are saying 2 days ago.

So in effect it gets frustrating and over time causes anger and you'll probably take it out on a new recruit who is on their first day at work and you happen to be the first door.

So what is it? A Joke or a Need?

Personal injury has become a joke! Why? There are so many sales people knocking on doors for personal injury claims. In the beginning everyone was like 'really, can you claim for this' or 'you should go and see this company for your injury'. Nobody was aware what was going on but millions of people were claiming for god knows what! Now over the pass few years it upset a few people.

Injured people weren't getting their compensation. They were getting either a small proportion of the compensation or were paying out of their own pockets. In those days as claims were new, you had to believe everything. It was like, 9 month road to riches. But it never really was riches in your pocket however it was for them as they knew the game. They made it seem like they were helping you but in fact were helping themselves with your money.

Some people even today, who are injured, resist to claim compensation as previous traumatic experience left them in the dark and now confused. 'I don't wanna be conned again!' Well I don't blame them.

In reality, it's definitely a NEED. Being compensated for something which wasn't your fault. It could be a road traffic accident, trip, slip or fall even being assaulted on the streets on your way home. These are the people that don't find it a joke. Their life has been disrupted by people who they never knew and now don't want to know.

It takes a lot of energy, especially if there are psychological injuries involved in order to get back on track to a normal life. They either miss out on exams, work, events, holidays and in general 'their' own personal lifestyle. Everything happens in an instant... You're enjoying your life and all of a sudden 'bang' your life changes.

You end up paying for medicine, specialists, travel expenses and other bills. So these people don't think personal injury is a joke as they can reclaim their expenses and be compensated for their loss of enjoyment and injuries.

Stop these canvassers from spoiling the need of personal injury and giving it a 'bad' name. Proceed with the right specialists for personal injury can only make your life a hell of lot better.
