

Know Your Rights Under the Lemon Law

Article by: Karen Kirby

Are you the lucky owner of a lemon?

If you think your car is a lemon, then you probably feel like you're always in the repair shop for the same repair over and over again. Sure the repair is covered under the vehicle warranty or extended warranty, but it's always in the shop!

If it seems your car is in the repair shop time and time again for the same repair, you may be the lucky owner of a lemon. Fortunately, your state has recourse for you, so get started protecting yourself right away.

Both the lemon law and an extended warranty can benefit you when you have purchased a new or used vehicle that appears to have defects that cannot be remedied by repeated repairs.

If you chose to purchase an extended warranty, know your rights given to you under the warranty, and be thorough in your inquiries. Be aware that if you decided to purchase an extended warranty with your vehicle, you may not be covered by the lemon law in your state.

If you chose not to purchase the warranty, know your rights under the lemon law, and immediately contact a lemon law attorney if you feel your rights have been violated.

And if your car is determined to be a lemon, can you legally sell your lemon? Though it may not always be easy to sell your car following a lemon law battle, do not despair. As long as you disclose all pertinent facts, legally you can sell that lemon!

Honesty regarding the lemon law is always the best policy, and disclosure makes it legal. Just follow a few simple guidelines and you'll be alright. Karen Kirby has over 25 years' experience in the computer industry, an MS in Computer Science, and a BA in Honors English. She has been helping people with Internet marketing since 1995. For more information on what you need to know about the lemon law see <http://lemon-car.brilliantbusinessmodel.com/what-you-need-to-know-about-the-lemon-law.htm> Be sure to get a free copy of the "Internet Marketer's Guide to Free Traffic" at <http://www.aimbright.com/ebook>

Copyright 2006 - Karen Kirby. All Rights Reserved Worldwide.