If you are planning on starting a new business, doing so without the guidance of legal counsel can be biggest mistake you can ever make. If you don't already have a lawyer representing you, you should obtain the services of a business lawyer who is well versed and experienced especially with regard to corporate matters and startup ventures.

If you are planning to start a new venture, a business lawyer with expertise and experience all of the fields affecting your business—such as labor or employment law, tax law, real estate law, banking and finance or intellectual property—would be your best bet. A business lawyer also helps you if you find yourself with a serious legal problem in the course of your business. A business lawyer helps in many areas from making business decisions to handling serious problems such as an injury caused by your product or an investigation by the SEC. If an inexperienced person handles these cases, he or she might cause serious harm to your business. Business lawyers play a critical role in several business activities, such as legal obligations and implications. If you are engaging in real estate acquisitions and dispositions, it is important to consult a business attorney. A business attorney can assist you with contractual drafting and negotiations as well as the acquisition and disposition of assets during a restructuring process. Thus, in every step of your business, right from setting up the venture to running it successfully, you need a business lawyer to help you take right decisions to run your business successfully without legal complications.

Finding a lawyer depends upon the state where you are running or planning to run a business. Since each state has its own code of law, it would be wise decision on your part to hire the services of a local lawyer well acquainted with the ins and outs of business law in the state.

To run a business in a state like New Jersey, which has strict business laws and norms, it is always safe to hire a well-experienced New Jersey business lawyer. Hiring an efficient lawyer is no easy task. It's always good to seek references from relatives or friends, who can comment upon the lawyer's track record and capability. Seeking a reference through the state bar of New Jersey is also a good idea. Setting or running a business venture is no easy game, so take the first right step by hiring the right lawyer, to move ahead towards growth and success.
